 TELECOMMUNICATIONS RECORDS
 LITIGATION, MDL No. 1791

This Document Relates To:

MDL Docket No. 06-1791 VRW

CLASS ACTION

PLAINTIFFS' SUR-REPLY IN OPPOSITION TO GOVERNMENT
MOTION TO STAY PROCEEDINGS

Date: February 9, 2007
 Time: 2:00 p.m.
 Courtroom: 6, 17th Floor
 Judge: The Hon. Vaughn R. Walker

1 The government has long maintained that the secrecy of its surveillance program would be 2 irrevocably compromised by any attempt by this Article III Court to adjudicate the constitutional 3 and statutory legality of the wholesale, suspicionless surveillance it is conducting of the 4 communications of millions of innocent Americans. It has similarly maintained that procedures
5 like those established by Congress in 50 U.S.C. § 1806(f), under which the Court protects the 6 government’s interest in the secrecy of its surveillance techniques by first reviewing in camera and 7 ex parte any information provided by the government concerning the surveillance, are insufficient 8 and inadequate.

9 Plaintiffs, in their previous filings have demonstrated to the contrary why the government’s 10 surveillance is not a secret and have submitted independent record evidence of the ongoing 11 surveillance that is occurring. Plaintiffs have thereby shown that they are “aggrieved persons” who 12 may use section 1806(f) to litigate whether the surveillance they are suffering is lawful.¹ As 13 Congress provided in that section: “[W]henever any motion or request is made by an aggrieved 14 person . . . to discover or obtain applications or orders or other materials relating to electronic 15 surveillance . . . the United States district court . . . shall, notwithstanding any other law, . . . review
16 in camera and ex parte the application, order, and such other materials relating to the surveillance 17 as may be necessary to determine whether the surveillance of the aggrieved person was lawfully 18 authorized and conducted.” 50 U.S.C. § 1806(f).

19 ¹ The government’s argument that plaintiffs have not yet proven they are “aggrieved persons” and 20 must do so before the Court can use the procedures of section 1806(f), Gov’t Reply in Support of 21 Stay at 12, ignores the undisputed record evidence showing wholesale, suspicionless government 22 surveillance of millions of innocent Americans. See, e.g., Declaration of Mark Klein (Hepting Dkt.
23 230); Declaration of J. Scott Marcus (Hepting Dkt. 231); Plaintiffs’ Request for Judicial Notice
24 (Hepting Dkt. 20); Declaration of Michael Markman (Hepting Dkt. 182, 194); Declaration of Elena
25 DiMuzio (Hepting Dkt. 298); Declaration of Barry Himmelstein (MDL Dkt. 156). Nor is the state 26 secrets privilege the reason why the government has not disputed the evidence in the Klein and 27 Marcus declarations; the government has confirmed that the information that is the subject of the 28 Klein and Marcus declarations can be litigated without intruding on state secrets. Hepting 6/23/06
RT at 76:16-20 (“THE GOVERNMENT: We have not asserted any privilege over the information that is in the Klein and Marcus declarations. THE COURT: Either in the declaration or its exhibits? THE GOVERNMENT: We have not asserted a privilege over either of those.”).

AT&T also has not disputed the authenticity or reliability of the testimony and evidence of Mr.
Klein, a disinterested non-party to the litigation, by, for example, showing that Mr. Klein was not

1 The government's unbidden and sua sponte filing of January 11, 2007 (MDL Dkt. 120),
2 further undermines its assertion that there is no practical way for this litigation to advance pending
3 conclusion of the interlocutory appeal in Hepting. In order to further its own litigation interests, 4 the government has submitted "materials relating to the surveillance," 50 U.S.C. § 1806(f), "for the 5 Court's in camera, ex parte consideration," MDL Dkt. 120 at 2:2-3. In its public notice of this 6 filing, the government stated: "The classified materials lodged with the Court on January 11, 2007
7 (as reflected in the notice of lodging filed on January 13, 2007), concern the Foreign Intelligence
8 Surveillance Court orders that were publicly announced today." MDL Dkt. 127 at 2:12-15.

9 As the Court has noted, section "1806(f), in pertinent part, provides procedures for 10 consideration of the propriety of FISA orders." Order Denying Remand (MDL Dkt. 130) at 7:20-11 22. The procedures of section 1806(f) begin with exactly the sort of in camera, ex parte
12 submission of surveillance-related materials that the government made in its January 11
13 submission. Thus, it appears that the government has no reluctance to utilize procedures like those 14 contemplated by section 1806(f) to submit surveillance-related materials when those procedures 15 suit its own litigation purposes, even while protesting that similar procedures cannot reasonably be 16 used to allow plaintiffs to pursue their case. The government cannot have it both ways.²

17 Moreover, the information the government has submitted to the Court relates to its 18 surveillance of persons it has probable cause to believe are confirmed terrorists. The FISA orders

19 an AT&T employee at the time of the events in question, that he did not have access to the 20 facilities in question, that he was not present at the facilities at the times he states he was, or that 21 other facts in his declaration are false. Nor has AT&T contested the authenticity of the Klein
22 Exhibits. To the contrary, AT&T has confirmed the status of Mr. Klein as an AT&T employee
23 until May 2004. Declaration of AT&T Managing Director—Asset Protection James Russell, Ex. A 24 (Hepting Dkt. 220). It has also vouched for the authenticity of the documentary evidence attested 25 to by Mr. Klein by asserting that those documents are AT&T's trade secrets and by asserting that their contents accurately describe AT&T's networks and facilities. Id. at ¶¶ 5 to 6, 10 to 13, 15, 17, 20-22. It has likewise vouched for the correctness of the percipient observations testified to by Mr.
Klein. Id. at ¶¶ 5 to 6, 15, 19.

26 ² Significantly, the government's submission occurred months after the Court denied the 27 government's state secrets privilege motion to dismiss and while that issue is up on appeal. Thus, 28 the January 11 submission cannot have been made for the purpose of invoking the state secrets privilege, as the government's earlier ex parte, in camera filings were (see Hepting Dkt. 124), but instead must be directed to other issues in the litigation.

1 that the materials in the government’s submission concern are “orders authorizing the Government
2 to target for collection international communications into or out of the United States where there is 3 probable cause to believe that one of the communicants is a member or agent of al Qaeda or an 4 associated terrorist organization.” MDL Dkt. 127 at 2:4-7 (emphasis added).³

5 The government’s willingness to submit these materials to the Court belies its assertion that 6 it cannot similarly submit in camera and ex parte, under the protective procedures of section
7 1806(f) as Congress intended, information concerning its surveillance of law-abiding Americans
8 who are not “members or agents of al Qaeda or an associated terrorist organization.” Information 9 about targeted surveillance of known terrorists is obviously more, not less, sensitive than 10 information about suspicionless mass surveillance of ordinary Americans. The government’s 11 refusal to submit these less sensitive materials, in addition to being self-contradictory, is also 12 contrary to the Court’s recognition of its fundamental Article III duty in this case: “While the court 13 recognizes and respects the executive’s constitutional duty to protect the nation from threats, the 14 court also takes seriously its constitutional duty to adjudicate the disputes that come before it. See 15 Hamdi v Rumsfeld, 542 U.S. 507, 536 (2004) (plurality opinion) (‘Whatever power the United 16 States Constitution envisions for the Executive in its exchanges with other nations or with enemy 17 organizations in times of conflict, it most assuredly envisions a role for all three branches when 18 individual liberties are at stake.’). To defer to a blanket assertion of secrecy here would be to 19 abdicate that duty, particularly because the very subject matter of this litigation has been so 20 publicly aired.” Hepting v. AT&T Corp., 439 F. Supp. 2d 974, 995 (N.D. Cal. 2006).

21 The government’s willingness to make its recent voluntary ex parte, in camera submission
22 to the Court during the pendency of the Hepting interlocutory appeal supports the conclusion that 23 procedures like those established by Congress in section § 1806(f) can reasonably be utilized by 24 the Court to proceed forward with this litigation, and that the Court can reasonably do so without 25 awaiting the conclusion of the Hepting interlocutory appeal.

28 ³ Plaintiffs note that even the government does not agree with Defendant Sprint Nextel’s argument that the FISA orders render plaintiffs’ case moot. (MDL Dkt. 141 at 5:5-11).
